“When wells break, we fix them, is how Key Energy Services CEO Dick Alario eloquently described his company, as he rang the opening bell at the New York Stock Exchange in October 2007. As the leading well services provider in the world, that is precisely what Key does.

Bringing sluggish wells back to a profitable and sustainable level of productivity is critical for companies involved in the production phase of the oil and gas industry. It is far more cost-effective to resuscitate an existing well than it is to drill a new one. Key Energy Services boasts an expertly trained staff and the most well-maintained rig fleet in the industry. With more than 150 locations throughout the United States, Mexico and Argentina, we provide solutions anywhere in the Americas.

We consistently improve the processes involved in well servicing and maintenance for better performance. We developed the proprietary KeyView® monitoring system to allow faster access to downhole data in real time and to facilitate decision-making at the wellsite. Key's commitment to developing technology, coupled with our adherence to the highest standards of employee safety and training, results in unparalleled service and value for our customers.

We are equally committed to the communities in which we live and work. When we moved our corporate headquarters to Houston, Key employees immediately began participating in a variety of fundraising and volunteering activities that support multiple charities in the area.

Key is a multi-billion dollar company and has nearly 10,000 employees in the US, Mexico and Argentina.

Performance is Key. ■
